ABSTRACT

Disclosed is a A two shot molding method which can be used is provided to make a fastener device having a fastener portion and integral seal portion of different material. More particularly, the invention relates to a The fastener device comprising includes a fastener part having a plastic head and anchor stem with prongs and a flexible seal of different material integral with the fastener part and the two molded together in a two-shot molding technique.